At the special session of the Grand Lodge Thursday evening the special committee to examine and quire into the management of the Masonic and Eastern Star Home submitted its report previously outlined in The Star. After general discussion, in which all interests were fully reprewhich all interests were fully repre-sented, the Grand Lodge adopted a por-tion of the report and referred the re-maining recommendations, which per-tain principally to the economics of the home and its management hereafter, to a committee to be appointed by Grand Master Jermane and a similar committee representing the Grand Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star, which will doubtless be ready to make its report doubtless be ready to make its report at the December meeting of the Grand Lodge. Grand Master Jermane said yesterday that he would carefully consider all phases of the case before announcing his committee, first conferring with Grand Patron Murch and Grand Matron Faber, with a view to uniform action and the best interests of the home.

Faber, with a view to uniform action and the best interests of the home. While some of the remarks at the Grand Lodge session, he said, represented extremes, he felt confident that a calm and careful consideration of the entire subject by the joint committee of the Grand Lodge and the Grand Chapter of the Eastern Star would lead to conservative action and a happy solution of the problems involved.

Grand Matron Ida V. Faber said she had not yet received official notice of the action of the Grand Lodge and that Grand Patron Murch she thought was still out of the city. However, no action would be taken until after the conference suggested by the grand master and that in all probability a special meeting of the Grand Chapter would be called to consider the subject. She said she had no doubt at all that the problems raised could and owing to the war, thrown out of work and thus enable them to earn their living. This good work appeals especially to those artistes who, owing to their dress and customs, feel altogether out of place in the popular canteens and free restaurants. The 'Repas des Artistes' is comfortably installed at 'La Feria,' once the most famous theater in the Montmartre district, which was graciously placed at the disposal of the foundress. Here 200 artistes receive each day a splendid lunch for the minimum sum of 50 centimes, the meal consisting of two excellent courses of meat and vegetables, followed by cheese, dessert, who and coffee.

"It is served by graceful waitresses, amongst whom many of our greatest Parisian vedettes figure: Mesdames Marie Lecoute, Cerny, Rachel Boyer, Marguerite Deval, Zambelle and others, who are happy to thus show their fellowship and sympathy with their less fortunate comrades. Every Wednesday the committee and the benefactors of the work take their seats at Mme. Bechmann's table and some of the greatest personalities in Paris show their interest by visiting Les Repas des Artistes and all come away enchanted with a work that gives with a graciousness that exceeds the gift."
